Malbork

– a scenic city on the River Nogat, famous around the world for its gigantic Teutonic castle. Its breath-taking panorama draws tourists like a magnet and invites them to stay longer. The castle can be viewed at various times of the day and from various angles. Malbork was granted incorporation charter in 1286. The Town Hall in the Old Town, John the Baptist Church and a defensive wall complex with Garncarska Gate and Mariacka Gate were built south of the castle area. The medieval castle is evidently the city's landmark, yet Malbork has much more to offer to tourists at all ages. A city of concerts, open-air performances, theatre plays and sport events. A colourful, rhythmically dancing fountains, street architecture elements and numerous restaurants. All this creates a unique atmosphere of the city that, until recently, has only been associated with its castle. In high season a colourful train circulates the city for the whole day. It connects all the possible places of interest: from a rope course, through dinosaur park, to castle miniature in 1:30 scale. The Street of Crocodiles, an atmospheric market, invites for a journey to the 1920s and 1930s. Castle visit is a must in Malbork. Who wouldn't want to take a photo with Great Masters of the Teutonic Order and see a modern amber exhibition? It's not a miracle that each year the city is visited by half million tourists from all over the world.

Malbork – the biggest gothic castle in the world

1 Malbork castle

Malbork castle was medieval Europe's largest fortress. Picturesquely situated by the Nogat river, the three-castle complex was, for 150 years, the capital of the Teutonic state. The castle's origins date back to the second half of the 13th century. Beginning in 1309, Malbork was the seat of the grand masters of the Teutonic Order and the capital of one of medieval Europe's most powerful states. With a surface area of some 21 hectares, Malbork Castle is the largest Gothic castle complex in the world and a masterpiece of late-medieval fortification and residential architecture. In 1997 Malbork Castle was designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Completion of the castle restoration project

For the Castle Museum in Malbork, the year 2016 is special as it marks the completion of one of the greatest challenges in the Museum's history: the project "Conservation and construction works in the Church Complex of St. Mary in the Castle Museum in Malbork". As a result, with a 20-hectare area, the castle is now Malbork castle was medieval Europe's largest fortress. Picturesquely situated by the Nogat river, the three-castle complex was, for 150 years, the capital of the Teutonic state. the world's largest Gothic castle complex, and a masterpiece of defensive and residential late medieval architecture. During more than 50 years of conservation works, great care was taken to restore the church complex in the High Castle to its former glory (i.e. the time before it suffered war damage in 1945). The project was primarily designed to rebuild the Church of St. Mary – the heart of the Teutonic Order. Also reconstructed was the statue of Madonna with the Child, the symbol of Malbork, which can be seen on the eastern wall of the castle. Conservation works also included St. Anne's Chapel, the Main Tower, the Klesza Tower and the Bell-ringer Cabin. The restored area is already accessible to visitors.

Amber exhibition

One of the castle's must-sees is the exhibition of Amber Contexts, looking at the gemstone from a variety of possible angles. Tree resin fossilised millions of years ago, amber reflects the complexity of nature. It can be regarded in a number of contexts, including a natural scientific and artistic one. It can also be looked at from a functional perspective. The Malbork amber collection has earned a reputation as one of the world's best and largest.

New militaria exhibition

From June 2016, the castle provides a new permanent exhibition: "Oriental militaria – Treasury". The exhibition features Persian and Indo-Persian weapons, many of which used to belong to Professor Lech Konrad Kobylński's collection. The remaining several dozen oriental militaria, including Afghan, Turkish, and Balkan exhibits, come from the Museum's own collection, which dates back to 1961. The exhibition includes almost all kinds of weapons and armor used in the Persian Empire from 16th to 19th centuries. A must-see for visitors!

Madonna figure

The monumental 8-metre figure of Madonna with Baby Jesus was the largest medieval sculpture in Europe. The figure was made in 1340, when the order chapel was expanded and turned into a Holy Virgin Mary Church. The figure was made of synthetic gypsum, originally with polychrome decorations and gold plating, 40 years later coated with gold and coloured glass mosaic. For over 600 years Madonna served as the symbol of the castle and the town. Year 1945 proved to be tragic for the castle and the entire town of Malbork. The tower and the church were destroyed during the war. The figure was smashed into pieces. In the 1960s the church was rebuilt – without the Madonna figure, however. We had to wait as long as 71 years to be able to enjoy the splendour and majesty of Madonna. The reconstruction of the figure of Madonna with Baby Jesus was possible largely due to the contribution of Mater Dei Foundation, set up in May 2007 on the initiative of the Society of Malbork Guides. The reconstruction of the figure was a part of the Malbork Castle Museum project entitled "Conservation and construction work at the Holy Virgin Mary Church complex at the Castle Museum in Malbork".

Main monuments

2 John the Baptist Church

Until the end of the 13th century the Old Town of Malbork was home to the John the Baptist Church. The church underwent multiple conversions in Middle Ages and in contemporary times. Its current architecture dates back to the 1468 construction campaign, which was aimed at bringing the church back to its former glory after the Thirteen Years' War. The works on the lintel and new bell tower continued until the 1520s. The most valuable artefacts in the church include a medieval figure of Saint Elizabeth of Thuringia and a neo-Gothic altar complex.

3 The Town Hall in the Old Town

The eastern frontage of the Market Square served as the seat of municipal authorities in medieval times. The building originates from the second half of the 14th century - from around 1380. It was converted on multiple occasions to repair the damage done during the town and castle siege, primarily in the 15th century. The Late Gothic southern gable is a testament to the construction work. Throughout the centuries the town hall hosted municipal events and celebration. In the 19th century the elevation was subject to necessary conservation works and damaged fragments of tracery were restored.

4 Saint Mary's Gate

Erected in the second half of the 14th century as a part of the town's defence system, the gate provided access to the town on the south side. The demolition of the medieval defence system was first considered at the beginning of the 19th century. It took place in 1807 at the hands of French troops who occupied the town. The gate roof sustained a damage during a fire in 1838, never to be restored to its former shape. The hip roof was covered with ceramic tiles in 1936–1937. The Saint Mary's Gate was scorched and the walls were pockmarked with bullets in 1945. It was reconstructed in 1964 without the historical penthouse and hip roof.

5 Garncarska Gate (Holy Spirit or Elbląska Gate)

Erected in the second half of the 14th century as a part of the town's defence system, the gate provided access to the town on the east side. A five-storey brick building built on a rectangular plane with three arch-shaped openings. Located within defensive walls surrounding the Old Town. In the 1930s a youth hostel was established in the building. It was partially damaged during military operations in 1945 and renovated 10 years later.

6 Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church, formerly Saint George Church

The first mention of the Saint George Church is traced back to 1403, when the church received Easter candles as a gift from the Grand Master. In the 1470s the church was rebuilt nearly from scratch after the damage suffered during the Thirteen Years' War. The building was severely damaged during the Swedish Deluge of 1658. The church in its current shape was built in 1712–1714. A half-timbered building except for the gable and the tower, with a wooden ceiling imitating brick groin vault. The interior of the three-nave hall equipped with benches and a choir loft for holding evangelical services.

7 Jerusalem Hospital

In the medieval times served as a shelter and was maintained from donations by local authorities. A two-storey brick building, dating back to the 16th century, built on a rectangular plane and partially plastered, with a gable roof coated with Monk and Nun style tiles. After World War II the building was partly reconstructed and adapted for residential purposes, only to suffer another damage during a fire in the mid-1950s. In 2004 the Association for Support of the Jerusalem Hospital of the German Order in Malbork was founded to support the reconstruction of the Jerusalem Hospital. The works started in 2006. The building was placed in service in 2006 and is operated by the Malbork Culture and Education Centre.

8 The train station building and platform

The train station in operation until today was put into service in 1890. A brick building in a neo-Gothic style, with richly structured elevation. The Polish State Railways initiated renovation works in 2010. The elevation and interiors of the train station were subject to reconstruction which took 2 years. All historical elements, e.g. bullet pockmarks from World War II, were preserved, and all the details fine-tuned – old emblems, polychrome, wooden ceilings and columns.

9 Latin School

The building from 1352, erected by the Grand Master Winrich von Kniprode, located next to the Nogat river bank at the Old Town. In the second part of the 16th century the building became home to a school, known as the Latin School since 1603. It operated there until 1864, when it was moved to a new building at 17 Marca Street. Vacated building was designated for residential and warehousing purposes. The top two storeys were burned in 1899 in a fire which swept through the city. A year later the warehouse was rebuilt, only to be destroyed in 1945.

In 2010 funds were obtained for its reconstruction, which started in 2011 in autumn. The building was commissioned in 2014 as Centrum Kultury i Edukacji Szkoła Łacińska (Latin School Culture and Education Centre). It is a part of the Malbork Culture and Education Centre. The building is home to an open-air ethnographic museum of early crafts, multimedia library, a multi-function room, astronomical observatory and planetarium.

10 Water Tower in Słowiański Square

The water tower in Słowiański Square in Malbork was erected at the time of the construction of water piping in the town. The tower is made of bricks and occupies a tall octagonal stone plinth. The tower is cylinder-shaped, with narrow pilasters at the quoins. It has three single space storeys with a water tank still in operation, and a spiral staircase.

11 Water Tower at Dworcowa Street

The water tower at Dworcowa Street in Malbork was erected in 1901 and has no distinctive architectural style. It is a free-standing structure located between Dworcowa Street and the tracks, in the vicinity of the bridge on the route to Elbląg and Malbork Główny train station. It is a brick, plastered tower built on an octagonal plane with pillars at the quoins.

12 Tourist Information Centre

The villa at 54 Kościuszki Street was once owned by the Flatauwer merchant family. It was erected around 1870. The body of the building is made up of diverse, asymmetric components with a classicistic architectural detail. Spacious interiors on the ground floor are furnished with high-quality decorative moulding with geometric and floral motifs.

Let's meet in the centre

Monument of King Kazimierz Jagiellończyk

The statue was erected on the town walkway in 2010 and features King Casimir IV Jagiellon sitting on a horse and holding a sceptre in the hand. The 348 cm – high sculpture is made entirely of bronze. In June 1457 the Polish King made a triumphant entry into Malbork, which initiated the so-called Polish times that lasted 315 years. The statue of King Casimir IV Jagiellon serves as a reminder of the Polish history of our town.

Miniature of the Castle in Malbork

A 1:30 scale miniature of the Castle in Malbork offers a unique opportunity to view the medieval fortress from an entirely different perspective. The tower is nearly two metres tall. Each and every detail has been faithfully and realistically represented. The object is made of nearly one million made-to-order miniature bricks and occupies an area of 50 sq m. The miniature is located close to the real walls, at Piłsudskiego Street.

Malbork coins

In Malbork we can see the elements of small architecture: aluminum coins. Three coins are attached to specially designed stones, while the other two can be found on the sidewalks in Kazimierz Jagiellończyk Square. The coins have been struck to commemorate Malbork's former mint, which operated in five historical periods, and produced Teutonic coins (twice), Polish coins (also twice), and Lithuanian (once). The coins are one-sided and present the obverse and reverse of the shilling of Konrad von Jungingen and the obverse of the shilling of Stephen Bathory.

The Cinnamon Shops

The Cinnamon Shops is a market offering pre-war regional specialties. Go back to the interwar times of Hanna Ordonówna, Adolf Dymśa and Brunon Schulz. Enjoy the old Malbork and the moment listening to pre-war hits and savouring local drinks. The Old Mangle invites you to relax and unwind.
